President's Letter

September 15, 2003

Dear ENY/ACRL Member,

It's hard to believe that the summer has passed by so quickly, and that campuses (and campus libraries) are again humming with activity. The ENY/ACRL Program Committee, under the Chairmanship of Vice-President Inga Barnello, has planned a wonderful Fall Conference, which will be held at the SUNY Institute of Technology in Utica on October 10. In addition to a number of interesting presentations, panel discussions and poster presentations, attendees will have the opportunity to tour the brand new Peter Cayan Library at SUNY IT, which opened in the spring. These tours will give concrete reality to the Conference theme: 2003: A Library Space Odyssey.

Since the Spring Conference of 2003 was postponed until the Fall, the annual Business Meeting which ordinarily takes place at the Spring Conference will take place at the Fall Conference. Past President Kristin Strohmeier will give the President's Report for 2002-2003, and written reports from other officers and Committee Chairs will be available. There will be a concerted effort to keep the Business Meeting short and informative, so as not to interfere with more important matters (such as dessert).

In other matters, our Chapter has been asked by ACRL to endorse the proposal to hold the 14th National Conference of ACRL in Pittsburgh on March 26-29, 2009, and we have done so.

The Eastern New York Chapter of ACRL enjoys an enviable position. Our membership is strong, and our financial situation is very solvent. We have a history of presenting well-attended, well-received professional conferences. But any organization benefits from the active involvement of its membership. I would invite you to consider volunteering for one of our Chapter Committees. Further information can be found on the Chapter web site at www.enyacrl.org. Also, in order to keep yourself fully informed on the activities of the Chapter, I invite you to participate in the Chapter discussion group, forum@enyacrl.org. Finally, if you have found ENY/ACRL to be useful to you, I would encourage you to recruit new members from among your colleagues. Dues and conference costs are very reasonable, and participation in ENY/ACRL provides the opportunity for networking and professional growth.

We are looking forward to seeing you at SUNY IT on October 10.

Michael McLane

Janice Graham Newkirk Award Research Report

by Susan H. Zappen

[Susan sent her report with the following message, which I thought worth including--Steve Black].

I have attached my report about my use of the Janice Graham Newkirk Research Award for both the next newsletter and for the award committee members. I am very grateful to the committee for the award and very excited about the service changes I have been able to implement.

I am continuing to pursue my interest in library services for remote users. In September ILL will use a student in Paris to test our ability with Prospero to scan and send articles not received through Ariel transmissions. In the beginning we would limit this service to students and faculty abroad. I suspect that the percentage of articles received via Ariel will continue to increase so that the small percentage received in paper can be efficiently scanned and sent to requesters, no matter where they reside ---- in China or the dorm room.

Again, thank you!

Susan H. Zappen

Library Services for Remote Users

Skidmore College has both students and faculty living off campus. Some live within commuting distance. Others live and study throughout the United States and the world. The Janice Graham Newkirk Research Grant allowed me to travel to France to meet with Skidmore's students studying in Paris. I wanted to meet with them face-to-face to hear directly about their library needs as students studying abroad.

Skidmore has an office in Paris with a computer lab that allows students to keep in touch with their families via email and provides access to Skidmore's Lucy Scribner Library. The students I met with were all third year students. They had all used the Scribner Library during their first two years on the Skidmore campus. They were comfortable navigating from the library web pages to the electronic resources they needed.

Skidmore's students in Paris take classes at different universities. French professors conduct classes at the Skidmore

Paris office as well. Because Skidmore's students are not recognized as fully registered students by any of the French universities, they are not given library privileges. The Director of Skidmore in Paris informs the professors teaching at the Skidmore office about the student-library situation. The office does provide a small collection of general information/reference books for the students.

The Skidmore students use the public library located in the Centre Pompidou. They are not given borrowing privileges but can use photocopy machines. When I visited the library, I found it to be bustling with activity and full of people. All of the computers were in use. The staff members at the information desk were friendly and helpful when I asked (in faulty French) for directions.

The greatest frustration for the students in Paris is their inability to borrow books. Our library has some electronic books. However, our e-books are not likely to support the coursework of those students in Paris or the other international programs. It will be some time before there is a critical mass of scholarly books available electronically that will meet the variety of student needs in international programs.

Unable to resolve the book-borrowing problem, I looked for another way to provide students with scholarly information. Interlibrary loan is heavily used on the Skidmore campus. Users submit all requests electronically using a form on the ILL web page. Mailing requested articles to other countries accommodates the needs of the students in the University Without Walls or Masters in Liberal Studies programs, but it does not meet the more immediate needs of undergraduates abroad with a research paper due.

I read about Prospero, an open source system for Internet document delivery, on one of my listservs. With Prospero, libraries are able to convert electronic documents received on Ariel workstations to PDFs, send them to a web server, and email the requestor to view or print out the articles using a web browser. In essence, Prospero allows libraries to promptly provide interlibrary loan of articles to students and faculty no matter where they reside. And Prospero is free.

Skidmore began using Prospero on June 30, 2003. The Interlibrary Loan Supervisor asked for volunteers among our heavy ILL users to test the system. Because 70% of our requested articles are sent to us electronically, we will be able to use Prospero for the majority of our article requests. Prospero not only provides better library service to our remote users, but it also improves the library service to community members on our campus.

Vassar College

Wall Painting: The library classroom at Vassar College Libraries has a new look, to the delight of staff and students! Over the summer artist Elizabeth Kendrick, of Waitsfield, Vermont, painted a mural on one wall that brings the beauty of the campus landscape into an otherwise windowless classroom.

Puzzles with a Purpose: Vassar College Libraries was in the news this summer - College and Research Libraries News (Vol. 64, No 7, July/August 2003) to be exact - with the publication of an article about its novel approach to torn out text. "Without a Cross Word," by serials assistant Mary Van Ornum, described the daily disappearance of the crossword puzzle from a local newspaper in our collection. It detailed how the mutilation promptly ended when she created a mock puzzle with clues directed to the mysterious clipper, and affixed it over the real puzzle early one morning. The article encouraged other libraries to adapt this idea for preservation purposes, and drew favorable responses from as far as North Carolina.

Crossword puzzles also played a role in our Libraries Tour during Freshman Orientation this August. "Puzzled: Get to Know Your Vassar College Libraries" was a crossword puzzle that Mary created and we distributed as a handout. Once completed, new students were armed with useful but fun facts about the library that the official tour did not have time to address. For example, clues told them where in the Libraries they could safely drink a cup of coffee, the fine for an overdue video, and the availability of Connect NY.

The Libraries orientation, with informative mini-sessions about each department balanced by giveaways and prizes (including opportunities to win by spinning a giant Wheel of Fortune set up off the main lobby) was reported by students to be one of the more worthwhile campus-wide events. Perhaps that's because students completing the Libraries tour were eligible to enter a random drawing for the grand prize, a digital camera.
